Over 200 snow guns in action and sun for the weekend!

Saint-Sauveur, Thursday, January 28, 2010 – The sun is starting to break through the clouds, as they slowly disperse in the Laurentians, after leaving us with a few centimeters of snow. Temperatures are dropping at night, so the snowmaking equipment will start back up tomorrow evening at all of our ski areas in the Saint-Sauveur Valley. This means more than 200 snow guns running full blast simultaneously before the weekend to provide you with the very best conditions!

Thanks to the favorable weather, the snow guns will be operating as long as possible. According to MSSI operations director David Dufour, “restarting the snow guns will allow us to freshen up the trails and provide the best snow conditions in the Laurentians for the weekend.”

In addition, our customers can expect gorgeous weather over the next few days; MétéoMédia is forecasting wall-to-wall sun—perfect conditions for practicing your favorite sport!

With all this freshly made snow, everyone will be able to fully enjoy their snow sports at our ski resorts in the Valley (Mont Saint-Sauveur, Mont Avila, Ski Morin Heights, Mont Olympia and Ski Mont Gabriel).
